Our mission

Strengthening the African voice on global challenges.

The Mo Ibrahim Foundation is an African organisation providing an African voice on current global challenges.

The Foundation provides data and analysis to assess these challenges at the continental level, bringing together Africa's stakeholders, including its youth, to discuss potential solutions, grounded in sound leadership and governance.

Our initiatives and programmes inform discussions, convene stakeholders, and foster Africa's future leaders.

Do not take Africa for granted.

Mo Ibrahim

Our work

To address Africa's governance challenges, foster future leadership, and plot a path for the continent's future progress, the Foundation works closely with leading organisations from Africa and beyond, bringing together stakeholders from across government, academia, policy-making and civil society.

To help deliver the change necessary and overcome these challenges, the Foundation:

Informs* discussions

Through data and analysis, the Foundation ensures that debates on Africa's governance are informed by the most relevant, up-to-date research.

Convenes* stakeholders

The Foundation brings together key stakeholders from across Africa and beyond to discuss the continent's most pressing issues and deliver tangible, practical solutions.

Fosters* Africa's future leaders

The Foundation provides resources and support to Africa's majority – its youth – to help foster the continent's next generation of leaders and move the development agenda forward.

We do this through a number of initiatives and programmes, such as:

- Our research, including the annual Forum Report and the Ibrahim Index of African Governance (IIAG).
- Events such as our annual Governance Weekends, online In conversation with... series and webinars.
- Fostering future leadership via Fellowships, Scholarships and our Now Generation Network.

Our people

The Foundation's team brings together a broad range of backgrounds and expertise on Africa affairs, from former heads of state to former heads of leading multilateral institutions. Our team are guided by the Foundation's mission to promote sound leadership and governance to transform the lives of Africa's citizens:

- Council
- Prize Committee
- IIAG Expert Panel

The Foundation also works with a number of prominent organisations who share our values and goals and understand the value of governance and leadership in Africa.

Introduction

After its launch in 2006, the Mo Ibrahim Foundation (MIF) logo with its colourful band has become a recognised element of the Foundation's visual identity. Today the overall system has been updated to ensure it can exist seamlessly across all platforms in a confident and expressive way, unifying all of the Foundation's projects and audiences with our work.

The new MIF visual identity consists of a redesigned logo which maintains its colourful band but incorporates a new typographic design. It has evolved in a way to still be recognisably Mo Ibrahim Foundation but also be more adaptable, dynamic and exist effectively in the digital world. Additionally, more control is placed in the use of typefaces, narrowing it down from two to one - Museo Sans - for all print and digital outputs.

Working with just the original five colours of the logo proved to be challenging as they are strong, primary tones, often requiring limited use and sometimes resulting in muted outputs. In this refresh of MIF's visual identity, emphasis has been put on bringing colour at the forefront in an effective way. To achieve this, the original colour palette has been enriched with more subtle tones, tints of some colours as well as some extra bright colours to allow flexibility and more options in final use.

The latest addition to the MIF visual identity is the Afro font, designed by the Foundation's in-house design team. Inspired by African fabric patterns, traditional wall paintings and drawings, the Afro font is a set of letterforms to accompany the rest of the MIF brand elements. It aims to bring to the visual identity some characteristics of the African art: the emphasis in geometric shapes, patterns and stylised forms, as well as to reflect Africa's vibrant culture.

The Afro font is a dynamic tool that works effectively both as a static element or in animated compositions. It can be used as a display font or a tool to generate patterns.

The new MIF visual identity is now a flexible system. A refreshed language capable of articulating different messages in different ways, to different audiences, in different circumstances.

Above all, it is produced to align with the Mo Ibrahim Foundation's mission – Strengthening the African voice on global challenges.

MIF design team, April 2024.

Primary logo

The MIF logo consists of two elements. A colourful rounded band and a new typographic design.

The primary usage of the logo, as seen below, has the band and typography left aligned. Occasionally, the two elements can split and be used separately.

Secondary logo

The MIF logo has evolved in a way to be more adaptable, dynamic and exist effectively in the digital world. When used on top of a coloured background, one colour can be applied to both the logo band and typography.

This makes it more flexible, playful and allows it to be integrated in various artworks rather than sit separately, on a white background.

The Afro font - used as a font

When used as a font, the Afro font is always combined with Museo Sans 500 and is never used exclusively.

Below are some examples of its use in words and acronyms that are key to the work and mission of the Mo Ibrahim Foundation.

The Afro font - used in patterns

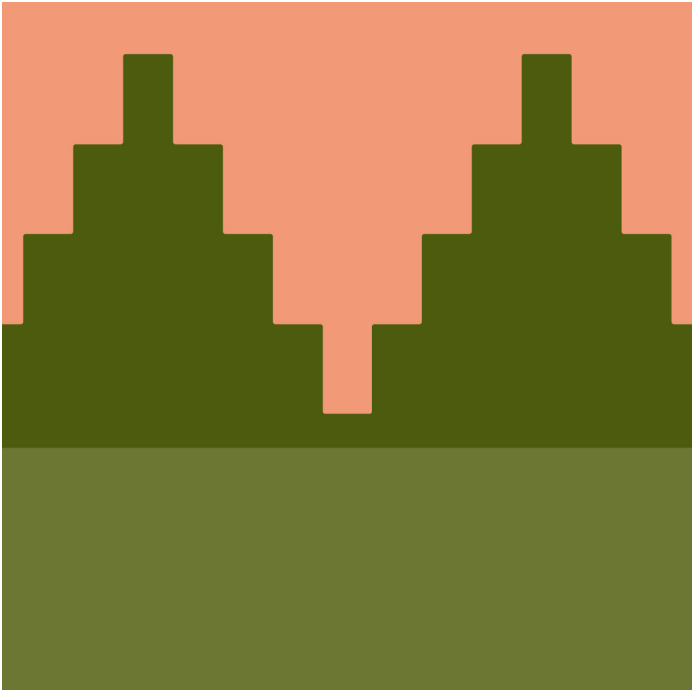

The Afro font letterforms were originally found in various African art applications. They were isolated from their surroundings, to create a font. Below, some of those characters are combined with other geometric shapes to form patterns once again.

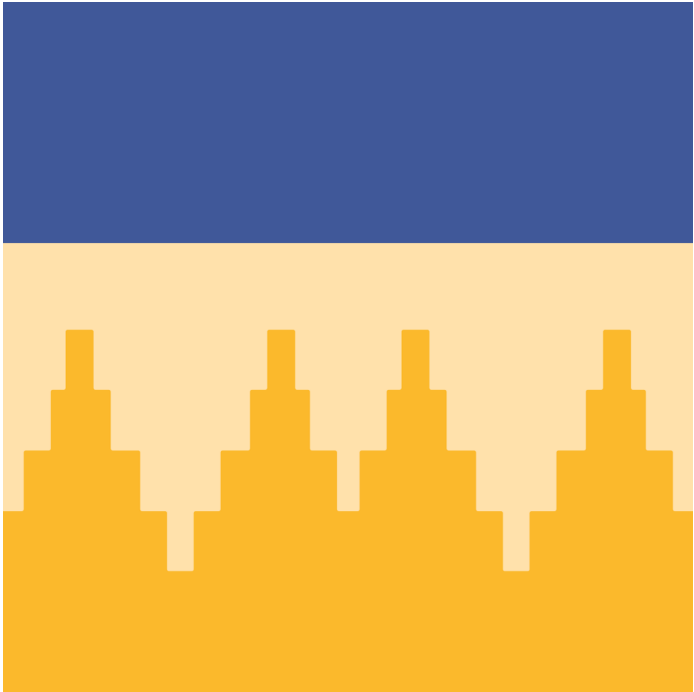

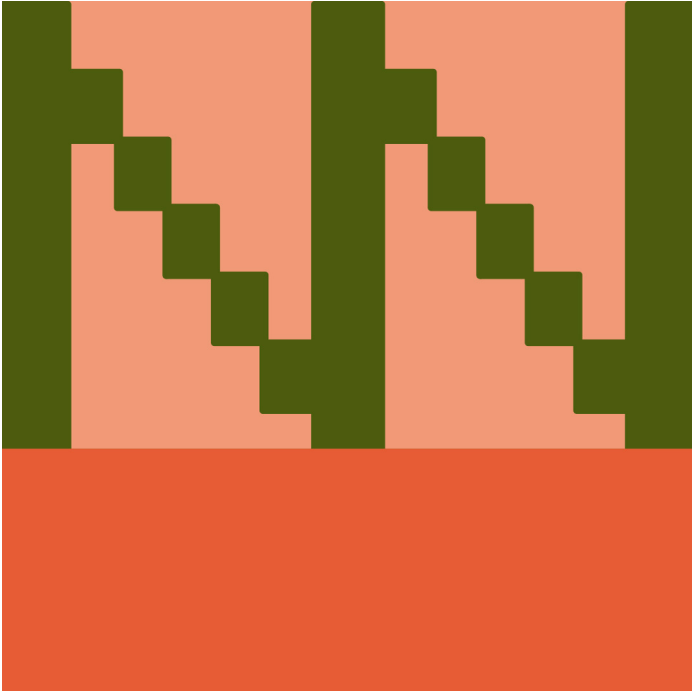

Using the Afro font both as a font and in patterns helps to ensure consistency within the MIF complex visual identity.
